

ESERA Summerschool, Udine, Italy July 25 -31, 2010

Notes on Applying: Staff

Dear ESERA Colleague

This note is for supervisors who might wish to apply for the next ESERA Summerschool in Udine, Italy. At a Summerschool, supervisors work in pairs to coach a group of around seven PhD students as they present and discuss their research. Some supervisors also give a plenary lecture or lead a workshop. Attending the Summerschool gives an opportunity to work closely with science education researchers and students in a stimulating international environment. It is also a way to develop further your skills and knowledge in PhD supervision.

Please note that staff may act as a coach at an ESERA Summerschool only if at least one of their current PhD supervisees is also attending.

The 2010 Summerschool will require 14 coaches and perhaps some additional staff members to run workshops. Traditionally, however, most of the lectures and workshops have been presented by staff acting as coaches for groups of PhD students – and this is a tradition we wish to maintain.

In the Staff Application Form, which you can download from the ESERA website, you are asked to provide some personal information and to indicate the contribution(s) you would like to make to the Summerschool. The deadline for receipt of applications is 31 January 2010. Completed Staff Application Forms should be emailed as a Word file to esera10@fisica.uniud.it. Please include your surname/family name in the title of the file (e.g. name-application.doc).

Coaches will be selected on the basis of their experience of supervision at PhD level, and the other contributions they offer to the Summerschool – and with a view to ensuring international participation. In order to keep the Summerschool to a reasonable size, the total number of staff members will be restricted.
